Payment Processing for Tech Support Companies

Some Ransomware will cripple your computer, while others want to steal your information without your knowledge. Pretty much anything that beeps, buzzes and connects to the internet can be serviced remotely by a reliable technical support company. Good technical support companies are legitimate businesses that need to be able to process payments for the services they provide. Unfortunately obtaining a merchant payment processing account can be difficult because most processors have classified technical support companies as high risk. Fortunately Genie Gateway can readily provide merchant accounts to well established technical support companies.
